Thoughts of home.of love.of family.joy returns. A difficult journey...a struggle worthwhile. C. Morrow. C. Morrow.Bierce disappeared in December 1913 at the age of 71. He wrote in one of his final letters: Good bye. A rope closely encircled his neck. 4.5 stars. HIGHEST POSSIBLE RECOMMENDATION. His eyes are bespeckled by the splendorous beacon of glory. He is about to be hung. At moments like this something happens to our senses. I remember when I had my Jeep accident. I was flipping over and over. Sounds were amplified. The crunch of steel was like a Wagner crescendo. The sound of breaking glass was like shrieking sirens. I was NEO. Everything seems brighter and more significant. He is standing on the bridge he had meant to destroy. These sensations were unaccompanied by thought. He was conscious of motion. He was known for his sardonic view of human nature. He is gone like smoke caught in a Western wind.jeffreykeeten.comI also have a Facebook blogger page at:<https://www.facebook.com/headingnorth>.A well written five stars book.) This is a memorable tale that has stuck with me. During the U.S.It's free online many places including here at www.ambrosebierce.org.g. Evidently this was no vulgar assassin.Such a fantastic sneaky story. This was way way ahead of it's time. There seems to be no escape for him. Ambrose Pierce tells his story in this book. My favorite three lines from this book. He was conscious of motion. He had not known that he lived in so wild a region. There was something uncanny in the revelation. The second chapter is a short flashback. What comes at the end is an utter surprise. Gripping. The description of the surrounding is incredible.but there's a kicker.My kind of read. Very Edgar Allan Poe-ish. Excellent! An Occurrence At Owl Creek Bridge.
